CHESS PRIZES AWARDED.

Special Honors Distributed Among Competitors In Masters' Tourney.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 21.—In addition to the four regular prizes won by Marshall, Jaffe, Jackson and Mlotkowski, three special prizes were awarded today at a dinner tendered to the participants in the masters' tournament of the Atlantic City chess congress on the Million Dollar Pier, at which A. J. McClure of Lakewood, N. J., head of the congress, presided.

The first brilliancy prize was won by Edward S. Jackson of Philadelphia for his game against Mlotkowski of Los Angeles. The second brilliancy prize went to Charles Jaffe of New York for his game against Sharpe of Philadelphia, and the prize for the best-played game to Frank J. Marshall, New York, for his second game with Sharpe. The donors of these prizes were Sydney Rosensweig of the Manhattan Chess Club and William F. Druke of Grand Rapids, Mich.

In his address at the dinner President McClure dwelt upon the universality of the game of chess, spoke of a game his father played with Paul Morphy and of his own meeting with the late Harry N. Pillsbury in whose honor he contributed the Pillsbury memorial prize which Marshall won.

The eighth American chess congress, for the purpose of arranging a national tournament a year hence, either in Atlantic City or elsewhere, according to circumstances, was organized with the following officers: Archibald J. McClure, Lakewood, N. J., President; Matthew B. Markland, Atlantic City, and Herman Behr, New York, Vice Presidents; Edward S. Jackson, Philadelphia, Secretary; Walter Penn Shipley, Philadelphia, Treasurer.
